Slowly but surely it has become widely accepted that the protection of animals and their habitats also benefits people. The more we ensure that the natural equilibrium is maintained, the greater the chance that we will be able to maintain an environment worth living in for ourselves as well.

This may involve donations or involvement in projects concerning better treatment of chickens and pigs, the support of domestic animal shelters and also projects for maintaining threatened animals and plant types. This can take place both on our doorstep as well as in the Brazilian rainforest.
