"The landscape drab and damp, the people loyal and joyful drinkers," is how the Roman historian Cornelius Tacitus described Germany two thousand years ago

That was then and much has changed. Despite the changes, Germans nevertheless still travel to countries near and far every year. They heed the call of holidays, sea, palm trees, sun, a short weekend trip to Paris, Rome or Barcelona or snow and après ski. Fun and frivolity, relaxed beach holiday or discovering a different culture are generally the wishes of travellers.
